

Property and Law

26 december 2013

Leonid Grigoriev, Alexander Kurdin

The Pillars of Stability, Wellbeing and Morality

Leonid Grigoriev is chief advisor to the head of the Analysis Center under the Government of the Russian Federation, Head of the World Economy Chair of the World Economy and International Affairs Department of the National Research University–Higher School of Economics.

Alexander Kurdin is a lecturer at the World Economics Chair of the World Economy and International Affairs Department of the National Research University–Higher School of Economics, researcher at the Economics Department of the Lomonosov Moscow State University.

Resume: Russia is in a precarious position: although formally enshrined in legislation, quite legal private property very often is not considered to be legitimate. The “unfair” procedures that brought about the emergence of mammoth private wealth during the privatization period breeds distrust in the authorities, the laws it adopts, and the measures it takes.

The article is an abridged version of a section of Strategy XXI project. The authors appreciate the ideas contributed by all the participants in the round table discussion “Compromise over the Property Rights between the Elites and Society amid Gross Inequality,” held at the Higher School of Economics on April 24, 2013.